

Learn Integrate Practice

About the Program

The Child and Adolescent Psychoanalytic Psychotherapy Program is a unique two-year clinical training that follows development from birth through adolescence and emerging adulthood, examining and building upon the internal and external challenges inherent to the experience of the child. Our accomplished faculty teach those who work with children and adolescents to become more knowledgeable and effective in treating the complex intrapsychic, interpersonal and environmental challenges commonly felt by today's youth and their parents. The program addresses the importance of initiating and maintaining alliances with parents during the treatment process. Our focus is on understanding the variety of constellations that compose the "parental couple" today (including LGBT, adoptive, divorced, immigrant, and single parents).
